Farnborough College of Technology

Local University Centre Offering Daytime Information Events

University Centre Farnborough is expanding and has seen consistent demand from parents who wish to return to the classroom without the fuss of moving away or travelling during peak-times to other universities.

The popularity among mature students of the local University Centre's degrees in Criminology, English Literature, Modern History, Psychology and Sociology has led to four new information drop in sessions being announced over the coming months.

At the sessions, visitors can have an informal conversation with lecturers about the University Centre's unique joint honours degrees which are delivered in two years rather than the more conventional three-year format.

The degrees are particularly suitable for those looking to train as a teacher as the reduction in time and fees needed to graduate puts a final year of studying a teacher training course within closer reach.

The Open Mornings will be held on Tuesday 20 February and Tuesday 7 May from 10.30am – midday; the afternoon sessions are Thursday 22 February and Thursday 9 May from 4.30pm to 6pm.
