University of Surrey

Join us at 6pm on Tuesday 16th January in LTG (in the Lecture Theatre Block) at the University of Surrey for a talk on "The magical world of motion: a child-friendly journey into classical mechanics" with Dr Caroline Shenton-Taylor (www.drcst.com/).

There is also a new webpage where all future public events held in the Maths&Physics depts at the University of Surrey are listed, including stargazing evenings and public talks: <https://www.surrey.ac.uk/school-mathematics-and-physics/events>

The magical world of motion: a child-friendly journey into classical mechanics:
Embark on an adventure as we delve into the fascinating world of classical mechanics! This child-friendly talk will ignite minds with curiosity and wonder, as we explore Sir Isaac Newton's timeless laws of motion with demonstrations, a sprinkling of physics and a lot of fun. Get ready to spin, balance and launch into understanding the physics that governs our everyday.

The talk is free to attend, open to all (public and University members, whether Institute of Physics members or not) and is unticketed. Please just turn up for a 6pm start if you would like to come.
